There are a huge variety of scenarios that prong collars are necessary for the advancement of a positive relationship between dog and owner. Not all do their research when selecting a dog, and the most clear example I can give is the many 70+ year old seniors that adopt or buy power breeds. You will not control a 4 year old cane corso with cookies and a head halter. If you would like more examples of scenarios where dogs benefit greatly from the use of prong collars, send me an email. More than happy to help in your understanding.
