

Terrance Hudman

I find the use of Authorise officers to end run the provisions of Magna Carta most disturbing and should be reviewed. The entry to private property without the requirement for a warrant issued under the supervision of a judge can lead to serious undermining of the democratic process and is reminiscent of the operations of the Gestapo. This was seen during the pandemic when so called "authorised officers" were used to confiscate patients personal medical records in contravention of all norms of a civilised society. Where does this stop?

The reversal of the onus of proof is most disturbing. proving a negative i.e. that you do not own an animal, is in fact impossible and goes against the basis of our legal system with its presumption of innocence.