To Whom It May Concern,

With the moritorium on genetically modified food crops and food up for renewal soon, I strongly urge the Tasmanian government to keep the moritorium in place and ban GMO's in Tasmania altogether.

Genetically modified organisms are unsafe, un-natural and unwanted in Tasmania, they pose a very real threat to our organic food industry as well as the clean, green and natural state image that we rely on so heavily for tourism.

If we let genetically modified crops into Tasmania it would be disastrous for our agricultural industry, local farmers, consumers as well as interstate and overseas consumers of our produce. The precautionary principle must apply when it comes to GMO's.

Yours sincerely,

Alice Graham
